The presentation and publication of the Ugolini manuscripts would not have been possible without the help and support by a host of institutions and individuals.

Firstly, a great debt of gratitude is owed to Mrs Drue Heinz and the Drue Heinz Trust for the support offered to the Butrint Foundation's Archive Project. Their generosity and support have been exceptional, and has allowed a rich programme of research into the archives of Butrint to be undertaken. Research that is providing a new and exciting light on the history of Butrint, and which is now coming to fruition in published form. The present volume is just one part of this programme of publications. Warm thanks are also due to the trustees of the Butrint Foundation – especially Lord Rothschild and Lord Sainsbury of Preston Candover – whose interest and enthusiasm has sustained the Butrint project for now more than a decade, and to the Packard Humanities Institute whose support has widened the scope of the archaeological and research programme at Butrint immeasurably.

The curators of institutes, museums and archives in Rome and Tirana have provided vital aid in bringing manuscripts and photographs together; particular appreciation go to Anna Maria Liberati, the director of the Museo della Civiltà Romana in Rome, and to Muzafer Korkuti, director of the Instituti i Arkeologjisë in Tirana. As ever, gratitude is due also to Diana Ndrenika and Iris Pojani at the International Centre for Albanian Archaeology in Tirana for invaluable practical assistance and help.

In the preparation of this volume, we have been fortunate to receive the help of many individuals. Valentina Vulpi undertook the unenviable task of transcribing the original Ugolini manuscripts, highlighting problems and suggesting solutions along the way; Christian Biggi edited the Italian texts in preparation for publication, and improved the elegance and clarity of the final version; and Nevila Molla redrew the original site plans, and assisted in the compilation of the photographic illustrations, with her customary precision and professionalism. Our thanks also to Cassy Payne for assisting in the editorial process and the presentation of the volume in electronic form, and to Richard Hodges, Daniel Renton and Katherine Wallis for their enthusiastic commitment to the Archive Project.
